

HVAC

The installation of air purification systems in all HVAC units on campus have been completed. The new system utilizes technology known as Needlepoint Bipolar Ionization (NPBI). These systems are designed to constantly clean the air in classrooms and other spaces. This investment in our air purification systems, along with the regular changing of high-quality filters and our on-going preventative maintenance program, will allow us to continue to provide our community with a clean indoor air environment.